"Do you know whose name you must tell me before I let you in?" And yet Ember said to Medra, "We were our own undoing." Night had come. Gift's lamp had flickered out. Only the red glow of the fire shone on Hawk's face. It was not the face she had thought it. It was worn, and hard, and scarred all down one side. The hawk's face, she thought. She held still, listening. And Tuly smiled and stroked his hand. "I said you have a strength in you, a great one," the witch said from the darkness. "And you know. and also their presence meant that the peaceful time was over, the days of walking in the silent. were passages concerning the true refiner's fire. Having long studied these, Gelluk knew that once. emphasis on the last word, and inwardly murmured, "Avert." She looked at the door of the bedroom. It opened and he stood there, thin and tired, his dark eyes. BUT OF COURSE he went down to Havnor South Port, in one of his father's carts driven by one of his father's carters, along with Master Hemlock. As a rule, people do what wizards advise them to do. And it is no small honor to be invited by a wizard to be his student or apprentice. Hemlock, who had won his staff on Roke, was used to having boys come to him begging to be tested and, if they had the gift for it, taught. He was a little curious about this boy whose cheerful good manners hid some reluctance or self-doubt. It was the father's idea, not the boy's, that he was gifted. That was unusual, though perhaps not so unusual among the wealthy as among common folk. At any rate he came with a very good prenticing fee paid beforehand in gold and ivory. If he had the makings of a wizard Hemlock would train him, and if he had, as Hemlock suspected, a mere childish flair, then he'd be sent home with what remained of his fee. Hemlock was an honest, upright, humorless, scholarly wizard with little interest in feelings or ideas. His gift was for names. "The art begins and ends in naming," he said, which indeed is true, although there may be a good deal between the
